Abstract

Industrial service businesses are one of the most important sector which impacts wide range of nation economy. Having said that, specifically, Hotel business is one of the dominant business in this sector in term of earning significant national income and growth each year. However, to become successful in this business, one key point to determine is recruitment. Recruitment is significantly considered as key of success in human resource management. Speaking of that, recruitment process allows organization to select people with admirable working attitude in the work place. Thus, in this report, Author proposes a tool to help recruitment process become less redundant and more precise which is represented as an attitude test created by applying Google Form as a tool creating the test. The test invented in Google Form which let applicants to the test while the application is being reviewed by the department of human resource seeking for people with the right attitude with quality to blend in to working environment, meanwhile, author invented a questionnaire to evaluate user's satisfaction for online application for employment test at Nouvo city Hotel. The questionnaire randomly rendered to 20 application and, as the result, application showed extremely satisfied with the test, specifically, in terms of simplicity and user friendliness. Nevertheless, it allowed application to the test anywhere to the interview. As a result, it reduced time of interview and saved applicants' time for unwanted interview experience.
