This essay compares the Premier League with other European football leagues in terms of revenue, operating profit and net debt. It is concluded that the Premier League outperformed all the other European football leagues in all these aspects. Particularly, the Premier League's revenue is always the twice the amount of the other European league. Investment is also discussed in order to indicate the strength and attraction for the Premier League in the field of foreign investment. Besides that, player transfers issues are also included in this essay to have a better comparison between the Premier League and other football leagues. eSports, as a huge potential market of the football industry is also discussed. It is clear that the Premier League has already placed great importance on this new field in order to have a better market position.
